

Alessia's Playbook

Community & Activation. Everything you own, step by step, with the why behind it, the exact words to say, worked examples, and how to handle the hard moments. This is your manual, come back to it.

Load this into your Grok and check it daily. Upload this whole playbook into your Grok so it becomes your daily second brain. Run your day against it, your one number, your Power Hour, your scripts, so activation stays front of mind and nothing slips. This isn't a document you read once; it's the thing you open every morning and reference whenever you're not sure what to say.

1 Your role

What changed, why your seat matters more than ever, and exactly what you own.

The whole business, in one picture

We simplified everything into one front door: the community. Ads bring people to the $89 community. From there, everyone we talk to is already a member. Some stay and grow; the right ones move up to the premium program. That's the whole model, one entrance, then a path upward.

Your job sits at the heart of it: get new members activated, keep them engaged, and move the right ones toward the premium. When you do that well, members stay longer, they get results, they refer others, and some of them become premium clients. Everything downstream depends on what happens in a member's first days, and that's your ground.

THE BIG SHIFT: REACTIVE TO PROACTIVE

The old way was reactive: noticing someone when they were already cancelling and trying to win them back. The new way is proactive: getting a member genuinely engaged in their first week so they never reach the cancel point in the first place.

Why this matters (the psychology): almost no one cancels because the content is bad. They cancel because they never really started. They joined in a burst of hope, then life got loud, the pain felt too big to touch, and they quietly drifted. A month later, an unused subscription just feels like guilt, so they cancel. By then it's too late to save them with a message. The only real lever is at the beginning, before the drift starts. That beginning is yours.

WHAT YOU OWN VS. WHAT TANIA OWNS

You own	Activation, engagement, and retention. Running the weekly orientation call. Catching wins and at-risk signals. Gathering testimonials. Setting (qualifying) members for the premium and handing warm, qualified people to Tania.
----------------	--

Tania owns	The offer itself, the closing calls, final creative direction, and the pitch words and slides you'll use.
-------------------	---

The mindset to carry: you're not a support inbox waiting for problems. You're the person who makes a new member feel seen in their first 48 hours, so they actually begin. That single habit, done consistently, is what grows this business.

2 Your one number

The single metric your seat is measured on, how it's calculated, and how to track it.

7-day

Activation rate: the % of new members who, within their first 7 days, finish the entire Start Here in the classroom, post once, and get a reply from us.

This is the number at the top of your scorecard, not churn. Churn is the lagging result; activation is the leading cause you can actually move today. Get people active early and retention follows on its own.

A MEMBER IS "ACTIVATED" WHEN THEY'VE DONE ALL THREE

- ☐ Finished the entire Start Here in the classroom (Calm Start plus the full 5-part video series, not just one lesson)
- ☐ Made one post (an intro or their situation, initials are fine)
- ☐ Gotten one reply back from you or Tania

Note: the Start Here is growing. We're adding the 5-video series to it, so "activated" means a member completed the whole Start Here in the classroom, not just Calm Start Lesson 1. Always point new members to finishing the entire Start Here.

Why these three, specifically: each one is a psychological threshold. Finishing the Start Here means they invested real time and absorbed the frame, they've started thinking our way. Posting once is the big one: the moment someone puts words on the page, they've stopped being a spectator and become a participant, and identity follows action. Getting a reply closes the loop, they feel seen by a real person, which is the single strongest reason people stay anywhere. Miss any one and the member is still on the fence.

HOW TO CALCULATE IT

For any given week's new members: (number who hit all three within 7 days) ÷ (total who joined that week) × 100.

WORKED EXAMPLE

20 people joined the week of the 1st. By day 7, 9 of them finished the Start Here, posted, and got a reply. Activation rate for that cohort = $9 \div 20 = 45\%$. Next week you're trying to beat 45%.

HOW TO TRACK IT (KEEP IT SIMPLE)

- 1 Keep a simple sheet: one row per new member, columns for joined date, finished Start Here, posted, got a reply, activated (Y/N).
- 2 Update it during your daily Power Hour (section 3), it takes minutes if you do it daily, hours if you let it pile up.
- 3 Each week, calculate the cohort's rate and bring it to the Growth & Retention meeting.

Start manual, not a dashboard. A simple spreadsheet you click through (name, joined date, and the 5-6 things you check) is easier than any dashboard right now, and it's where you'll actually see the patterns: "most people aren't finishing the Start Here," "these ten never got a reply." Once you can see the patterns, feed them into your Grok ("here's what I'm noticing, what should I try?"). Manual first, insights second, automation later.

ALSO ON YOUR SCORECARD (SECONDARY)

- ☐ Monthly churn %, trending down (toward under ~10-12%).
- ☐ Seven-day responsiveness, nothing that matters sits unanswered, weekends included.
- ☐ Testimonials gathered, a steady flow each month.
- ☐ Qualified sets to the application, the right members moved toward the premium.

Your 90-day goal: we measure your starting activation rate first, then set a target together. Moving that number up from where it starts is the win, more than any single month's churn figure.

3 Your weekly rhythm

The routine that makes activation happen without you having to remember it. Daily, weekly, and weekend.

Every day: the Activation Power Hour

One focused hour, same time every day, aimed entirely at the members in their first 7 days. This is the most important hour of your day. Do it first, before the inbox pulls you into reacting.

RUN IT IN THIS ORDER

- 1 Pull this week's new members, the people currently inside their 7-day window. These are the only people whose activation you can still influence, so they come first.
- 2 Sort them into three buckets: not started (no Start Here, no post), started but not posted, and posted. Each bucket gets a different move.
- 3 Not started: send a specific, personal DM (template below) and tag them under a prompt post so posting feels easy.
- 4 Started, not posted: nudge with a concrete, low-effort ask ("just initials and two sentences").

- 5 Posted: reply personally, by name, with real guidance, this is the reply that activates them and it's the highest-leverage thing you do all day.
- 6 Scan for wins and at-risk signals as you go, and log them (wins go to section 6, at-risk gets a same-day reach-out).
- 7 Update your activation sheet so the number stays live.

Don't: spend the Power Hour answering general questions or moderating old threads. That's reactive work, it feels productive but it doesn't move your number. Protect this hour for the 7-day window only.

POWER HOUR DM, NOT-STARTED MEMBER

"Hi [name], I saw you joined this week, so glad you're here. I don't want you to feel lost, so just one thing to start: what's the hardest part of this for you right now? Even a sentence helps me point you to the right place."

POWER HOUR NUDGE, STARTED BUT NOT POSTED

"[name], you've made a start, that's the hard part. The one thing that changes everything here is posting your situation, even just initials and two sentences. Want to drop it under [this week's prompt post]? I'll personally reply with a first read."

EVERY WEEK

- ☐ Run the weekly onboarding & orientation call (see section 4).
- ☐ Cancel block (1 hour, batched): send the exit form, tag the top 3 cancel reasons, bring the patterns to the weekly meeting. You're learning who stays and why, not chasing everyone back.
- ☐ Skool Churn Insights (skootcrm.com/skool-churn-insights): get this set up and shared if it isn't already, and use it weekly. It surfaces cancel reasons straight from Skool, so we still learn why someone left even when they never replied to the exit email.
- ☐ Update the retention tracker with Riaz.

Why the cancel block is batched and calm: chasing every cancel one-by-one, in the moment, is emotionally draining and rarely works, they've usually decided. Batching it once a week turns it from a sad scramble into research: you're spotting patterns (what kind of member leaves, and why) that you then fix at the entrance. That's how a cancel becomes useful instead of just a loss.

SEVEN DAYS A WEEK: RESPONSIVENESS

The community can't go dark, weekends included. Our parents often have the most time to post and reach out on weekends, so silence then costs us members. This isn't about working full weekend days, it's a short daily check-in so members always hear back and nothing at-risk slips.

A SUSTAINABLE WEEKEND RHYTHM

- A 15-20 minute check-in each weekend morning: scan new members, at-risk signals, and any direct questions.
- Acknowledge anything that matters (a question, a struggling member, a win) so no one waits until Monday.
- The rest can wait. The rule is simple: the ones that matter never slip.

The mindset: you're not trying to save everyone at the exit. You're getting more people to truly start at the entrance. That's where the whole game is won.

4 The onboarding & orientation call

Your biggest deliverable. One call, every week, that welcomes, orients, teaches, and softly points to the application.

This call does two jobs at once. First, it orients brand-new members so they actually know how to use the community and don't drift. Second, it works like a weekly webinar that teaches and, at the end, points the right people to the application.

FULL RUN OF SHOW

First ~10 min

Welcome + orientation

Warm welcome, then genuinely walk them through the community. This is the part people skip and it's why members get lost.

- Where the Start Here is, and that they should finish the whole thing this week.
- How to add the weekly calls to their calendar (show them, don't just say it).
- Where to post, and where to ask questions.

- That they can message you (Alessia) directly, and that you actually reply.

~5 min

Wins (if any)

Invite a couple of recent wins. For very new members there may not be many yet, so pull from the wider community, a recent member win, or a short story of your own. It doubles as our testimonial engine, so record it (with permission).

~20 min

The training

Real, valuable teaching, the reason they showed up. Pure value, no selling here. Teach one useful thing they can act on this week.

Last ~5 min

The soft pitch, to the application

The transition (Tania gives you these words + slides): "That was the general advice. If you'd like advice specific to your exact situation, here's how we do that," then point to the application. You pitch to the application, you don't close.

Why orientation comes first: a confused member is a churned member. People don't stay in a place they can't navigate. Two minutes showing them where things live, and that a real person is on the other end, does more for retention than an hour of content. Never assume they'll "figure it out."

IF ATTENDANCE IS LOW OR NO ONE HAS WINS YET

- Low attendance is normal early. Run it fully anyway and record it, the recording becomes an asset new members watch later.
- No member wins yet? Use one of your own, a past member's, or a story from the wider community. The point is to show what's possible.
- Always record (with permission), you're building a library of proof and re-watchable orientation.

Who builds what: Tania gives you the pitch section word-for-word, plus those slides. You build and own the welcome, orientation, wins, and training. Tania approves your first version, then it's yours to run and improve each week.

BUILD THE DECK IN CLAUDE

Build this presentation in Claude, it's fast and keeps everything on-brand. Here's the slide structure to start from:

- 1 Welcome: who we are, why you're here, what this call is.
- 2 How the community works: the one front door, what your membership gives you.
- 3 Your first steps: finish the entire Start Here in the classroom (Calm Start plus the 5-part series).
- 4 How to navigate: where to post, where to ask questions, how to message Alessia, where the calls live.
- 5 Add the calls to your calendar: the weekly call time, with the link.
- 6 A recent win: one story that shows what's possible.
- 7 The training: 2 to 4 slides of real teaching.
- 8 Want specific help?: the soft pitch to the application (Tania's words and slides).

After the call: post the recording where members can find it, DM anyone who registered but didn't attend with the replay, and follow up personally with anyone who engaged with the pitch. (DMing the no-shows is a big one, they still need to see the pitch.)

EVERY WEEK: THE WELCOME NEW MEMBERS POST

Separate from the call itself, post a weekly welcome post in the community (like Kim used to do). It makes new members feel seen and pulls them toward the call and the classroom.

- Tag, by name, the members who joined in the last 7 days.
- Link the orientation replay so they can catch it if they missed it.
- Share a couple of recent wins (pull from the Wins tab, a member's story, or the wider community).
- Invite them to watch the replay and message you anytime.

WEEKLY WELCOME POST

"Welcome to our newest members this week, [@tag each new member]! So glad you're here. If you missed our orientation call, catch the replay here: [link]. And a couple of wins from the community lately: [Lisa just shared ..., Kim shared ...]. Jump into the Start Here, post your situation, and message me anytime, I'm here for you."

Why this beats just posting the replay: tagging them by name makes them feel they belong on that call, so they're far more likely to watch it, engage, and see the pitch. New members get both this post and their welcome DM.

5 The first week: the Golden Path

The exact touchpoints that turn a new member from a spectator into a participant. This is how you hit your number.

Every new member walks a path in their first 7 days. Left alone, most drift. With these touches, most activate. Each day has a job, a script, and a fallback for when they don't respond.

DAY 0: WELCOME (EMAIL + THANK-YOU PAGE)

"Welcome. There are only two things to do this week: finish the entire Start Here in the classroom, and post your situation using this template. Even initials and a couple of sentences is enough. That's it, I'll be looking for your post."

Why: reduce it to two clear actions. Overwhelmed people do nothing; a tiny, obvious next step gets them moving. This is your Day 0 welcome email, revamp our current welcome email to say exactly this.

DAY 1: PERSONAL DM

"Hi [name], instead of a generic welcome, can you reply with 1-2 sentences: what's the hardest part of this for you right now?"

Why: the goal is to get them to type anything back. The first reply is the hook, once someone has spoken to you, they're far more likely to stay. If no reply by Day 2, send a lighter nudge: "No pressure at all, even one word about where things stand helps me help you."

DAY 3: INCENTIVE TO ACT

"Post your situation using this template by Friday and I'll get you a personal reply with a first read and some wording to try."

Why: a small deadline plus a promised reward (your personal read) overcomes the fear of posting. If they still haven't posted, offer to post on a call together or let them send it to you privately first.

DAY 7: GENTLE RE-ENGAGE

"If you haven't finished the Start Here or posted yet, I get it, it usually means the pain feels big and it's scary to touch. That's normal. If you're willing, just reply 'start' and I'll give you the smallest first step."

Why: name the real reason (fear, not laziness) and shrink the ask to a single word.
Removing shame is what re-opens the door.

THE "SITUATION POST" TEMPLATE YOU GIVE MEMBERS

SHARE THIS WITH NEW MEMBERS TO MAKE POSTING EASY

"[Initials or first name] here. My situation: [one line, e.g. my adult daughter stopped speaking to me 2 years ago]. What I've tried: [one line]. What I'm hoping for: [one line]."

WORKED EXAMPLE: A MEMBER'S FIRST WEEK

Day 0: Maria joins, gets the welcome email. Day 1: you DM her the "hardest part" question; she replies "my son blocked me and I don't know why." Day 2: you reply warmly, point her to Start Here Lesson 1, and invite her to post. Day 3: she hasn't posted, you send the "post by Friday and I'll give you a first read" nudge. Day 4: she posts using the template. You reply personally, by name, with one concrete thing to try. Day 6: she's finished the Start Here. Activated. That reply on Day 4 is the whole game.

Not everyone needs every touch. If a member is already posting and getting replies on the discussion board, they don't need all four DMs. But still check one thing: did they watch the orientation call or the replay? If not, message them ("I noticed you weren't on the orientation call, did you get a chance to watch the replay?"), because that's where they see the pitch. You're messaging every new member either way; the specific touches just depend on what they have and haven't done (posted but never finished the Start Here, watched the Start Here but never posted, and so on). After day 7, for members who did all three, the conversation naturally moves to the discussion board and the DM becomes the exit. Keep the energy on the front end and watch churn come down.

Don't: send the same generic "let me know if you need anything!" to everyone. It reads as automated and gets ignored. Every touch names them and references their actual situation.

6 Catching wins (the milestone moment)

When a member has a breakthrough, that's the moment to move them deeper, and to get a testimonial.

WHAT COUNTS AS A WIN

- Any sign of movement in their relationship: "my daughter texted me back," "we spoke for the first time in a year," "she agreed to meet."
- An internal shift: "I finally stopped begging and it changed everything," "I feel calm for the first time."
- An engagement win: they showed up to a call, posted vulnerably, or helped another member.

Why the moment matters: right after a win, a member is flooded with hope and gratitude, they attribute the change to us, and they're at their most open. That's the moment they'll say yes to a testimonial and be genuinely curious about going deeper. Wait a week and the feeling cools. Speed is everything.

THE SEQUENCE: WIN TO TESTIMONIAL TO SET

- 1 Spot it during your Power Hour or daily scan.
- 2 React warmly in the moment, publicly celebrate, then reach out (script below).
- 3 Get the testimonial while the feeling is fresh (section 8).
- 4 Qualify them gently in the DMs, including the money question (section 7).
- 5 If qualified, set a call with Tania. If not, you've still gained a testimonial and a warm relationship. Nothing is wasted.

MILESTONE OUTREACH

"Thank you so much for sharing that! Tania would love to hear more about your story and how things have been going. Could I grab 15 minutes with you this week?"

WORKED EXAMPLE

A member posts: "My son called me on his own for the first time in 8 months." You comment publicly ("This is huge, thank you for sharing it here"), then DM the milestone outreach. On the 15-minute call you capture a testimonial (section 8), then gently ask the qualifying questions. She's a fit and open to going deeper, so you set a call with Tania. One post became a testimonial and a warm set.

Every win conversation gets you two things: a testimonial and a possible set. Even if they don't move forward, you've deepened the relationship and captured proof. There is no wasted win.

Don't: jump straight from "congrats" to "want to buy the premium?" It feels transactional and kills the moment. Celebrate first, capture the story, qualify gently, and only then talk about the next step, in that order.

7 Setting & qualifying

You set, Tania closes. Your job is to make sure only qualified people reach her calendar.

START HERE: THE APPLICATION IS YOUR QUALIFYING SCRIPT

Before anything else, go through our application end to end and read every question. Tania is reviewing it now to make sure it's current and accurate, and you'll always work from that live version. The key idea: the application questions are exactly what you qualify for in the DMs. Every question on it is something you're listening for in conversation, so once you know them cold, you already know how to qualify.

We're rolling this out in phases over the next 2 weeks. We'll work through each piece together and build the muscle, you don't have to have all of it perfect on day one. Start by learning the application, then we layer in the rest.

YOUR PART OF THE CLOSER FRAMEWORK (THE "SET")

CLOSER is how we run a conversation toward a decision. You own the first three letters, the "set." Tania owns the rest, the "close."

- | | |
|---------------------|---|
| C - Clarify | Understand where they are and why they reached out now. |
| L - Label | Name what they're dealing with, so they feel understood. |
| O - Overview | Overview past pains: what have they already tried that didn't work. |

Tania takes it from there: Solidify, Explain away concerns, Reinforce. That's the close.

SET CONVERSATION, IN THE DMS

Clarify: "Tell me a bit about what's going on with [child's name/situation], and what made you reach out now?"

Label: "So it sounds like [reflect it back: you've been carrying this for years and you're exhausted from trying to fix it alone]. Is that right?"

Overview: "What have you already tried to reconnect, and how did that go?"

Why you reflect before you offer anything: people don't buy from someone who's selling; they open up to someone who understands them. When you label their situation accurately, they feel heard, and only then are they open to a next step. Objections live in the vague, so the more specific you get them, the smoother the path.

THE FINANCIAL QUALIFY (BEFORE ANYONE BOOKS)

MONEY QUESTION

"Based on what you told me, I think you might be a great fit for our next thing, and I'd get you a call with Tania. Just so we don't waste anyone's time, the next step is an investment, around $4K-$15K to keep working with us. Is that something you'd be totally against?"

Not against it → book. "Yes, against it" → "Totally understand, no worries" → don't book. Say it calmly and without apology; the ease in your tone tells them it's normal.

Why we ask about money before booking: it's respectful of everyone's time, including theirs. A call that ends in "oh, I had no idea it cost that" wastes their hope and Tania's calendar. Framing it as "so we don't waste anyone's time" makes it feel considerate, not pushy. "Totally against" is deliberately soft, it's easy to say "no, not against it," which is all we need.

QUALIFY BEFORE THE ONBOARDING CALL TOO

PRE-ONBOARDING MESSAGE

"To make sure we give you as much value as possible, we have a few quick questions to understand your situation before your onboarding call. Please fill this out."

Coming soon (Tania is building this with Jesse): a short application before the onboarding call that auto-qualifies people green / yellow / red, the same way the premium application does, so you walk in already knowing who's likely to upgrade. Not live yet, we'll roll it in.

WHAT DISQUALIFIES (DON'T BOOK THESE)

- Flatly against the investment range.
- Wants to start "someday," not now (see the booking rule).
- Looking for free ongoing coaching, not ready to commit.
- Not the decision-maker and can't involve them.

Booking rule (BANT): anyone who says they'd want to start more than a week from now isn't ready to buy, don't book them. We only book people ready to move.

THE HAND-OFF TO TANIA

When you set a call, give Tania a short summary so she walks in warm. Use this format:

SET SUMMARY FOR TANIA

Name: [name] · Situation: [one line]

What they've tried: [one line] · The win/trigger: [what prompted this]

Money question: [not against it] · Ready to start: [this week/soon]

8 Collecting testimonials

Proof is what makes the ads and VSL work. You gather it continuously, gently.

Why this matters: our ads and our VSL only work because real parents tell their stories. Every testimonial you gather becomes proof that helps the next parent believe change is possible. This is one of the most valuable things you do, so treat it as an ongoing habit, not a one-off task.

WHEN TO ASK

Always ask at a win, the moment a member shares a breakthrough, never when they're still in the hardest part. A happy member says yes easily; someone still struggling feels put on the spot.

THE MINDSET: ASK FORGIVENESS, NOT PERMISSION

You do not ask "is it okay if we use this?" That's asking permission, and it hands them an easy "let me think about it." The right to use it is already handled by the disclaimer members agree to when they join (Skool's terms, or our Start Here). So you assume usage. What you ask them for is only to share their story, framed around helping the next parent.

Why this works: people hesitate when you ask for a yes/no on "using" them. They don't hesitate when you invite them to help another parent who's exactly where they were. The permission is covered; the ask is only ever "will you share your story."

ON THE 15-MINUTE CALL, EXACTLY HOW IT GOES

- 1 The whole call IS the testimonial. Frame it as a warm check-in to celebrate their progress, and record it. Spend most of it just drawing out their story, that's your raw material.
- 2 At the very end (reciprocity is highest after you've given your time), ask for the usable "moments."
- 3 Only if they hesitate do you reframe with best-case / worst-case. Otherwise you capture it and move on.

THE ASK, END OF CALL (HELP-OTHERS FRAME)

"This has been so good to hear. So many parents are exactly where you were, feeling completely alone and sure it's too late. Your story could be the very thing that helps one of them believe it's possible. Would you share a couple of moments with me so another parent can hear it?"

You never say "can we use this in our marketing?" That single question is what kills the yes. The disclaimer covers you; the ask is only ever "will you share your story to help someone like you."

IF THEY ASK "WHAT DO YOU MEAN, FOR ANOTHER PARENT TO HEAR IT?"

"There's a chance another parent who's thinking about the community sees your story, and it's exactly what they needed to believe change is possible for them too."

ONLY IF THEY RAISE A PRIVACY WORRY (SAY IT ONCE)

"I hear you. Just so you know, we only ever advertise to parents, so your child won't see it. But let's play it out. Best case, they never see it and another parent gets their child back because of you. Worst case, they do see it, and they find out you cared enough to work this hard on your relationship. Would they really think that's a bad thing?"

If they still want it kept private, take it down, no friction, it happens rarely so don't build a heavy approval process around it. If they want to stay anonymous, that's fine too: voice off-camera, first name only, or change the name.

HOW TO ASK, STEP BY STEP

- 1 Offer a quick 15-minute check-in with the happy member, framed as celebrating their progress, and ask for the testimonial at the end. After you've given them your time, they say yes more easily (that's reciprocity at work).
- 2 Ask for "moments," not a review. Walk them from "the moment you realized what you were doing wasn't working" to "the moment you realized things had actually changed." Specific moments move people; generic praise doesn't.
- 3 Have them repeat the question before they answer ("The moment I knew things had changed was...") so each clip stands on its own without your voice in it.

THE MOMENTS TO CAPTURE (ASK THESE IN ORDER)

1. "Take me back to before, what was the hardest part, and what were you doing to try to fix it?"
2. "What made you decide to join / take the jump?"
3. "What shifted for you here, and when did you first notice it?"
4. "What's different in your relationship now?"
5. "What would you say to a parent who's where you were?"

HOW HARD TO PUSH

Push hard on the meaning: their story could be the very thing that helps another parent get their child back. Stay gentle on the format. Offer a ladder so no one ever feels forced to expose themselves, and any rung is a win:

- ☐ Full video (best)
- ☐ First name only
- ☐ Voice only
- ☐ Written
- ☐ Anonymous

Meet them where they're comfortable. A written or anonymous testimonial still counts.

HANDLE THE PRIVACY FEAR (ONCE)

IF THEY WORRY THEIR CHILD WILL SEE IT

"We only ever target parents in our ads, so your kids won't see it. And honestly, worst case, if they ever did, it reads as: I cared enough to work this hard on our relationship."

Say it once, reassure, then let them pick their spot on the ladder. Don't push past a real no.

ORGANIZE WHAT YOU COLLECT

- Save every testimonial in one place (a shared folder), labeled by name, format, and the core result.
- Note the strongest line from each, those become ad and VSL hooks.
- Bring new testimonials to the weekly meeting so the team knows what proof we have.

Permission: we include a disclaimer in Skool's Start Here so we're allowed to use what members share. If anyone is ever uncomfortable later, we listen to their concern first, and take it down if they still want, which is rare.

"Thank you so much for sharing that! Tania would love to hear more about your story and how things have been going. Could I grab 15 minutes with you this week?"

MONEY QUESTION

"Based on what you told me, I think you might be a great fit for our next thing, and I'd get you a call with Tania. Just so we don't waste anyone's time, the next step is an investment, around $4K-$15K to keep working with us. Is that something you'd be totally against?"

SOFT DECLINE (NOT AGAINST IT, BUT NOT READY)

"Totally understand, no rush at all. I'll be right here in the community, and whenever the time feels right, we can pick it back up."

TESTIMONIALS

TESTIMONIAL ASK

"What made you take the jump? Was there anyone else's story that resonated? Do you think someone else like you would benefit from hearing yours?"

PRIVACY REFRAME

"We only target parents, your kid won't see it. Worst case, it reads as 'I cared enough to work this hard.'"

RE-ENGAGEMENT & AT-RISK

GONE QUIET A WHILE

"Hi [name], I noticed it's been a little quiet for you here, and I wanted to check in as a person, not a reminder. Where are things with [situation] right now? Even a sentence helps me support you."

AT-RISK / CONSIDERING LEAVING

"I completely understand, and there's no pressure either way. Before anything, I just want to make sure you got what you came here for. What were you hoping would be different by now? Let's see if I can help with that first."

10 Handling hard moments

The tough situations, and exactly how to respond. Warmth first, then a clear path. Escalate anything you're unsure about.

AN UPSET OR ANGRY MEMBER

Lead with acknowledgement, never defense. Let them feel heard before you solve anything.

SAY

"I hear you, and I'm really sorry this has felt frustrating. Let me make it right. Can you tell me exactly what happened so I can fix it for you?"

Then actually fix it, or flag to Tania if it's beyond you. Follow up once it's resolved so they feel closed-looped.

Don't: explain, justify, or match their energy. Defensiveness confirms their frustration. Calm acknowledgement de-escalates almost everything.

A REFUND OR CANCEL THREAT

Stay calm and curious, not panicked. Understand the real reason before you respond to the surface one.

SAY

"Totally understand, and I want to make sure this was worth it for you. Before anything, can I ask what you were hoping would be different? If there's something we can fix or a step I can walk you through, I'd love to, and if not, I'll take care of it for you."

Genuine problem you can solve → solve it. Payment/access/refund language → flag to Eti/Tania per the dispute-risk rule. Never argue someone out of a refund.

SOMEONE VENTING OR TRAUMA-DUMPING

These are parents in real pain. Hold space briefly and warmly, then guide them to a concrete next step, you're a compassionate guide, not their therapist.

SAY

"Thank you for trusting me with this, it sounds incredibly heavy and you're not alone in it here. The best next step I can give you is [Start Here lesson / a specific post / a call]. Let's start there together."

A NO-SHOW TO A CALL THEY BOOKED

WARM RE-BOOK, NO GUILT

"Hi [name], we missed you, life happens. I still saved a spot for you. Want me to grab you a new time this week?"

AN OVER-NEEDY MEMBER (ENDLESS DMS)

Kind, but with a boundary that points them to the community so they don't depend solely on you.

SAY

"I love how committed you are to this. The best place for questions like this is the community, post it there and you'll get support from me and from other parents who've been exactly where you are. I'll keep an eye out for it."

SENSITIVE OR CRISIS LANGUAGE (ESCALATE)

Escalate immediately: anything mentioning self-harm, a member in crisis, or a safety concern goes to Tania right away, don't handle it alone. The same for anything with dispute-risk language (refund, chargeback, "fraud," "unauthorized"): acknowledge kindly and flag it per our escalation rule.

The rule of thumb for everything here: acknowledge the person first, solve or guide second, and escalate the moment it's beyond your lane. Nobody expects you to have every answer, they expect you to be human and to not let it drop.

11 Your KPIs & your review

The numbers you own, how they're measured, and what a strong 60-90 day review looks like.

YOUR KPIS, AND HOW EACH IS MEASURED

7-day activation rate	Primary. % of each week's new members who finish the Start Here, post, and get a reply within 7 days. From your activation sheet.
Monthly churn %	Cancellations ÷ active members. Trending down, toward under ~10-12%. From the retention tracker + Skool Churn Insights.
Responsiveness	Nothing that matters sits unanswered, weekends included. Watched via the community and your own daily check.
Testimonials	A steady flow each month, logged in the testimonials folder.
Qualified sets	The right members moved from the community into the application / a call with Tania.

We measure your starting activation rate first, then set targets together and review them in the weekly Growth & Retention meeting.

THE WEEKLY SELF-REVIEW (5 MINUTES)

- What was my activation rate this week, and did it move?
- Did anything important slip, and why?
- What win or at-risk pattern did I notice?
- One thing I'll improve next week.

WHAT A STRONG 60-90 DAY REVIEW LOOKS LIKE

- ☐ The number moved: activation rate is clearly up from where it started, toward the target we set together.
- ☐ The standard held: the community stayed responsive seven days a week, and nothing important slipped.
- ☐ You built systems: Golden Path touchpoints, templates, and the orientation deck are running smoothly and improving.
- ☐ You owned the community's health: wins surfaced, at-risk members caught early, qualified sets sent to Tania.
- ☐ Self-learning & initiative: you're actively getting better at the craft, studying activation and retention, bringing ideas Tania didn't ask for, and improving this playbook as you learn. This is what turns a good community manager into a great one.

The bar: I'm not looking for perfection at 90 days. I'm looking for a clear upward trend, a community that feels tended and alive, and someone taking real ownership and growing into the role. That's what earns the seat and everything that comes with it.

OWNERSHIP: THE REAL BAR FOR THIS ROLE

Completing the checklist is not the job. Owning the numbers is. "I messaged everyone" is not done. Done is "the numbers are moving, and if they're not, here's what I'm changing." This is your lane, no one else is going to fix it for you.

- If churn isn't improving, ask two questions. One: am I doing enough on the front end (the touches, the replies, the follow-ups)? Two: are we even bringing in the right people? If you see a pattern, say the last 30 who joined and left barely engaged at all, that's a signal. Bring it to Jesse: "I don't think we're bringing in the right type of member."
- Test and learn. A message not landing? Try a different one. Read the retention playbook, look at what Alex shares, use ChatGPT or Grok to learn how to get better at activation, churn, and testimonials. Getting great at the craft is part of the role.
- Load your 5 KPIs into your Grok. Tell it these are the five you own, and have it keep you on them daily, even challenge you.
- Flag content gaps, don't create them yourself. If a specific need shows up over and over (say a divorced-parent / dealing-with-an-ex theme, 15+ times in 30 days), bring it to Tania and she'll record a short training. We're not making a video for every situation, but real recurring patterns are worth flagging. Over time, cleaning up and tightening the classroom can become part of your role too.

The leadership shift: you're already great at following the playbook. The muscle to build is thinking outside it, owning your lane end to end, spotting what's not working, and fixing it without waiting to be told. Do that for 90 days and the conversation about your role and comp changes completely.

12 What good looks like

How you'll know you're winning, and the red flags to avoid.

Winning

- ☐ New members activate in their first week
- ☐ The community stays responsive seven days a week
- ☐ You surface wins and at-risk signals in real time
- ☐ Only qualified people reach Tania's calendar
- ☐ A steady flow of testimonials
- ☐ You know your activation rate every week

Red flags

- ☐ Energy going to cancels instead of activation
- ☐ The community going dark on weekends
- ☐ Members joining and going silent, unnoticed
- ☐ Unqualified people booking Tania's time
- ☐ Generic "let me know if you need anything" DMs
- ☐ Bringing cancel stories but not the activation number

The through-line: your job is to get more people to truly start in their first 7 days, and to move the ones who are ready toward Tania. Do that consistently and everything downstream works.
